Bin Laden Slams 'Zionist' War

In tape, al Qaeda leader urges militants to fight in Sudan

CAIRO, EGYPT | Osama bin Laden issued new threats in an audiotape broadcast on Arab television Sunday and accused the United States and Europe of supporting a "Zionist" war on Islam by cutting off funds to the Hamas-led Palestinian government.

He also urged followers to go to Sudan, his former base, to fight a proposed U.N. peacekeeping force.

His words, the first new message by the al Qaeda leader in three months, seemed designed to justify potential attacks on civilians — something al Qaeda has been criticized for even by its Arab supporters.

He also appeared to be trying to drum up support among Arabs by accusing the West of targeting Hamas, a militant group that fights against Israel and now heads the Palestinian government. Citing the West's decision to cut off aid to the Hamas-led government because it refuses to renounce violence or recognize Israel, bin Laden said the U.S. and Europe were waging war on Islam. Hamas spokesman Sami Abu Zuhri was quick to distance the group from bin Laden, declaring that "the ideology of Hamas is totally different from the ideology of Sheik bin Laden."

The intelligence community has informed the White House that it believes the tape is authentic, said Bush's spokesman, Scott McClellan. SALAH NASRAWI (AP)

MISTAKES

Case In Point

A Livingston, Mont., hunter safety instructor may face disciplinary action for accidentally discharging a shotgun shell into the ceiling of the library during a class, state Fish, Wildlife and Parks officials say. Instructor John Lundberg was teaching a class to about 50 students on Wednesday. He was demonstrating how, in the excitement of the hunt, someone can accidentally load the wrong ammunition into a firearm, creating a dangerous situation. Lundberg then loaded a 20-gauge double-barrel shotgun with a 28-gauge shell, and the shell accidentally discharged. The shotgun pellets fired into the ceiling of the community room at the library, the agency said. (AP)

VITAMINS

It's Like Smoking Orange Juice!

A Quebec company is making a cigarette that contains vitamins, CTV News reported. "VitaCig" — which also does not stain teeth, inventor Roger Ouellette said — provides smokers with "all the vitamins you lose, plus some vitamins to help you," he said. Health officials aren't exactly supporting the product, however. "A safe cigarette is one that's not lit," Health Canada spokesman Matthew Cook said. Cook said that the cigarette still contains tobacco and has the same toxic emissions of other cigarettes. (AP) a man whose wallet was empty, officials said. The frustrated robber tried to flee but got lost and couldn't find the exit, officials said; people eventually realized the man's gun was fake and held him for police. (AP)

New Orleans Set for Mayor Runoff

Nagin scores well with black voters, but loses ground among whites

NEW ORLEANS | In a complete reversal of support from four years ago, Mayor Ray Nagin scored heavily with black voters and was practically abandoned by whites as he and Lt. Gov. Mitch Landrieu won spots in a mayoral runoff election.

The black incumbent, who received most of his support from white voters in the 2002 election, garnered less than 10 percent of the vote Saturday in predominantly white precincts, according to GCR & Associates Inc., a consulting firm analyzing demographic data for the New Orleans Redevelopment Authority.

But Nagin, who offended many white voters in January when he suggested God wanted New

ALL IN THE FAMILY: Candidate and Lt. Gov. Mitch Landrieu, left, and his sister U.S. Sen. Mary Landrieu, D-La., walk into a news conference in New Orleans Sunday.

Orleans to remain a "chocolate city," saw black voters rush to his defense. He received 65 percent or more of the vote in predominantly black neighborhoods, the consultant found.

Landrieu, who is white, finished with 29 percent of the overall vote to Nagin's 38 percent. He finished second in black neighborhoods to Nagin and second in white neighborhoods to third-place finisher Ron Forman, bolstering his claims that he can help bring together diverse groups to help New Orleans emerge from the devastation left by Hurricane Katrina.

Landrieu said Sunday that the number of voters who chose candidates other than Nagin demonstrated that voters want change. "This city, this great city, calls for change," he said.

Nagin, a former cable executive seeking his second term as mayor, said his overall win is an endorsement of his performance and his plans for the city's future.

"I just feel we're on the right track, and people have verified that to me," he said.

The numbers suggest it will be a serious challenge for Nagin to broaden his support in time for the May 20 runoff. MICHELLE ROBERTS (AP)

6 Alaska Students Accused of Plot

ANCHORAGE, ALASKA | Police said a group of seventh-graders hatched an elaborate plan to cut off power and telephone service to their middle school, slay classmates and faculty with guns and knives, then escape from their small Alaska town.

The arrest Saturday of six students in North Pole, a town of 1,600 people about 14 miles southeast of Fairbanks, marks the nation's second breakup of an alleged Columbine-style school attack in a week. Five Kansas teenagers suspected of planning a shooting rampage at their high school were arrested Thursday.

The Alaskan seventh-graders had been picked on by other students and wanted to seek revenge, police said. The students had planned to disable North Pole Middle School's power and telephone systems, allotting time to kill their victims and flee from town, police said. (AP)

States Spar Over HIV/AIDS Funds

WASHINGTON | AIDS started as a big-city epidemic infecting mostly gay white men, and now it's prevalent in the South and among minorities. Yet the federal law that helps the neediest patients has not kept up with that evolution.

By some measures, AIDS patients in California and the Northeast get more money per capita than those in the South, where activists are lobbying for a bigger share.

With hundreds of millions of dollars at stake, Congress is attempting for the first time since 2000 to amend the Ryan White CARE Act of 1990.

The federal law sends about $2 billion a year to local and state programs that give health care, drugs and other aid to the uninsured or those needing help on top of Medicaid or private insurance. These services reach more than 500,000 people per year. (AP)

FEMA Seeks Rita Refunds

Texans asked to return $1.26M in wrongly issued recovery funds

BEAUMONT, TEXAS | The federal government is asking 625 people in Texas to pay back a total of $1.26 million in recovery aid they shouldn't have received after Hurricane Rita.

Texas families received more than $592 million from the Federal Emergency Management Agency after the September storm.

Most of the money FEMA wants — $1.14 million — was incorrectly paid for damage to homes that were not the owners' primary residences, agency spokeswoman Hannah Vick said. Damages to secondary residences are ineligible for FEMA money.

In other cases, the same person received multiple $2,000 FEMA payments, or multiple people from the same household received the $2,000.

The agency began the process

called recoupment, which is similar to an audit, in mid-March. A similar process is ongoing for payments made after Hurricanes Katrina and Wilma.

People who receive a letter requesting repayment have 30 days to submit the amount in full or set up a payment plan. After 30 days, 2 percent interest begins accruing. Residents can appeal FEMA's decision.

Typically, 2 percent to 3 percent of FEMA funds paid after a disaster are made improperly, FEMA officials have said. Sometimes errors are caused by incomplete applications. Sometimes, FEMA workers mistakenly approve payments.

Cases of suspected fraud are turned over to law enforcement officials.

Federal auditors have faulted FEMA for much of the benefit abuse after last fall's hurricanes, citing an inadequate accounting system. The federal Government Accountability Office has said thousands of inappropriate payments were made because people could repeatedly apply for and collect benefits.

In February, audits by the GAO and the Department of Homeland Security found that as many as 900,000 of the 2.5 million applicants who received aid under FEMA's emergency cash assistance program — which included $2,000 debit cards given to evacuees — were based on duplicate or invalid Social Security numbers, or false addresses and names. Wal-Mart in Political Fray

Retailer fights back with campaigns against vocal critics

WASHINGTON | There is no candidate. There are no ballots. There won't be an Election Day. And yet it may be the hottest, highest-stakes political contest in America today.

It's the campaign against Wal-Mart.

A year-old effort to force the nation's No. 1 private employer to change its business practices has evolved into a Washington-style brawl: tens of millions of dollars spent by Republican and Democratic political consultants using polling, micro-targeting, ads, e-mails, direct mail, grass-roots organizing and strategic "war rooms" to ply their trade in the corporate world.

Their fight involves the rising cost of health care, the painful realities of globalization and the waning relevance of organized labor.

"Our opponents have organized

Wal-Mart officers Jay Allen and Bob McAdam talk to community leaders.

the likes of a political campaign against us," said Bob McAdam, Wal-Mart vice president of corporate affairs. "It would be nonsense for us not to respond in a similar fashion."

Wal-Mart's main opponents are the Service Employees International Union, which started Wal-Mart Watch, and the United Food and Commercial Workers International Union, which funds a separate campaign called WakeUpWalMart.com

After failing to organize employees of Wal-Mart Stores Inc. with traditional tactics, the unions decided to use modern campaign and communications methods to shame them into change over wages, health insurance, treatment of workers and proclivity for buying non-U.S. goods.

Wal-Mart has responded with counterattacks and a multimillion-dollar public campaign to polish its image.

On both sides are some of the best political strategists money can buy.

Wal-Mart officials acknowledged that the company has become a political issue — at least for Democratic candidates who need labor's money and organizing might.

"But I think the true test of whether that's true or not will play itself out in the midterm elections and the presidential elections to come," McAdam said.

Police Try to Tame Nepali Protests

Officers use tear gas, rubber bullets to control size of rallies

KATMANDU, NEPAL | Nepali police clashed with thousands of anti-monarchy protesters Sunday in Katmandu, injuring at least three, as the Himalayan country's deepening crisis led to more demonstrations — and more violence — in the capital.

After days of holding back and allowing protesters nearly free rein on the road that skirts the city, police on Sunday were again aggressively working to keep separate protests from massing into gargantuan rallies against the rule of King Gyanendra, who seized power 14 months ago.

The road has been the focus of recent demonstrations, including those that late last week brought more than 100,000 people onto the route, which falls within the curfew zone.

Protesters trying Sunday to cross the road on the eastern edge of Katmandu were beaten back by police who first fired tear gas, then rubber bullets, independent Kantipur television reported. Doctors at a hospital said they treated three people injured by rubber bullets.

Protests have intensified across the Himalayan country since Gyanendra offered Friday to allow the alliance of seven opposition parties behind the demonstrations and a general strike to nominate a prime minister and form a government.

Opposition leaders, the country's communist rebels and ordinary demonstrators say the king's offer to resolve the crisis, which began with his seizure of power in February 2005, fell short of a key demand — the return of parliament and creation of a special assembly to write a new constitution that could limit — or even eliminate — the monarchy. BINAJ GURUBACHARYA (AP)

Bush calls on prime minister designate to quickly form coalition

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | Insurgents killed three American soldiers in the Baghdad area Sunday and fired mortars near the Defense Ministry in a spree of violence that killed at least 27 Iraqis as politicians began work on forming a new government.

The largest Sunni Arab party raised new allegations of sectarian killings — one of the most urgent issues facing the new leadership.

At least 61 American service members have died in April, putting it on track to pass January — with 62 — as the deadliest month this year. It represents a jump over March, which with 31 deaths was the lowest monthly toll for the Americans since February 2004.

The violence underlined the challenge as prime minister-designate Jawad al-Maliki began on Sunday the tough task of assembling a Cabinet out of Iraq's Shiite, Sunni and Kurdish parties.

President Bush called al-Maliki, the Iraqi president and the parliament speaker — all named on Saturday — and urged the quick formation of a coalition government. LEE KEATH (AP)

Local

River Called 'Endangered'

Environmental group says Shenandoah hurt by new development

Virginia's Shenandoah River, a resource rich in history, is among the nation's 10 most-endangered waterways, according to environmental group American Rivers.

Development — paved driveways, parking lots, roads — threatens the storied Shenandoah, which made its debut last week at No. 5 on America's Most Endangered Rivers list.

While it is not the most polluted in the nation, it has reached a crucial time when decisions made by local governments could affect the river's health for decades.

The Shenandoah is an important source of drinking water for the counties it traverses and is a main tributary of the Potomac River, which supplies 90 percent of the drinking water for the Washington area. The Shenandoah supplies 13 percent of the Potomac's water.

The report focuses mainly on the six mostly rural Shenandoah Valley counties in the river's vast watershed, and their growing attraction to developers.

"Land and home values have seen a sharp rise," Page County administrator Mark J. Belton said, adding, "There's been a noticeable increase in interest." (AP)

$829 Million Budget With Big Spending Increase OK'd

The Arlington County Board has approved an $829 million budget that includes a 9.2 percent spending increase — the largest in more than ten years. Officials say the spending hike is needed for pay raises for public safety employees and maintenance for parks and county buildings. The board gave some property tax relief to homeowners following double-digit increases since 2001, dropping the rate by six cents, to 81.8 cents for each hundred dollars of assessed value. (AP)

Police Investigating Death Of Woman, 9-Year-Old Boy

Prince George's County police are investigating a double homicide, including the death of a 9-year-old boy. Officers responded to the 3700 block of Donnell Drive about 11:00 a.m. Sunday. There they found a 31-year-old woman and the boy dead at the scene. Police did not identify the relationship between the two, and they have no suspects or motive. (AP)

Protester at IMF Rally Arrested for Carrying Stun Gun

WASHINGTON | A man protesting near the headquarters of the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank was arrested Saturday night for carrying a stun gun, police said Sunday.

Jason Perkinson, 26, of Richmond, Va., was in a group of about 30 demonstrators when an officer noticed him trying to conceal the weapon.

Perkinson never actually tried to use the stun gun and it was later disabled, police said.

He was arrested and charged with possession of a prohibited weapon, and is expected to be arraigned on Monday. (AP)

District Leaders Question Library Plan

WASHINGTON | Some D.C. leaders say the city's planned multi-million-dollar overhaul of the Martin Luther King Junior Memorial Library is not enough to create the state-of-the-art building necessary to transform the library system.

Mayor Williams last month released an ambitious library renovation plan that includes construction of a $180-million-dollar main library several blocks away from the King library, at the site of the old convention center.

Several city leaders attended a town-hall-style meeting to discuss the project Saturday. Many disagreed with plans to replace the King library at Ninth and G streets NW, saying it shouldn't be abandoned after only about 30 years.

Williams wants to lease the building, with the proceeds paying for its replacement. But opponents of the plan say the building's flaws can be corrected without closing it and moving its books to other libraries while it's replaced. (AP)

Wizards on Wrong Side of History

Washington must find a way to stop James after his triple-double

WIZARDS | Hollywood arrived a few days ago as a film crew began shooting scenes for the next "Spider-man" sequel. On Saturday, East 9th Street in Cleveland was closed to accommodate the production.

One block away, nothing could stop the city's resident superhero.

LeBron James had a dazzling NBA playoff debut by making history with a triple-double in a 97-86 series-opening win over the Washington Wizards, the Cavaliers' first post-season victory since 1998.

With 32 points, 11 rebounds and 11 assists, James became just the third player to get a triple-double in his first playoff game. Johnny McCarthy did it for the St. Louis Hawks in 1960. Magic Johnson did it for the Los Angeles Lakers in 1980.

To put it in context, Michael Jordan had 23 points, four rebounds and 10 assists but lost his first playoff game for the Chicago Bulls. Kobe Bryant's debut? Two points.

During a timeout, after James outscored the Wizards 9-0 in the first quarter, members of the Cavs' "Scream Team" ran onto the floor and began throwing black T-shirts with the word "Witness" printed on the front into the crowd.

Maybe they should have handed them out on the Washington bench, too. "Every bucket they got, every offensive rebound they got, it seemed like they were a result of him,"

Washington's Jared Jeffries said.

At practice on Sunday, the Wizards, who returned to Washington following the game, began working on new schemes to try and slow James in Game 2 on Tuesday night.

"We'll make some adjustments, but we have to do things better," Wizards coach Eddie Jordan said. "He's a terrific player, and the more you play against him the more you understand how good he is."

Bryant Struggles, Suns Beat Lakers

Thomas scores 22 as Phoenix grabs early lead in playoff series

NBA PLAYOFFS | Even with a poor shooting afternoon from Kobe Bryant, the Los Angeles Lakers still nearly stole their playoff opener against the Phoenix Suns on Sunday.

Tim Thomas had 22 points and a career playoff-high 15 rebounds, and the Suns escaped with a 107-102 victory.

Steve Nash had 20 points, including a crucial 3-pointer with 1:07 to play, and 10 assists. The Suns made 32 of 35 free throws, 8-for-8 by Nash. Shawn Marion added 19 points, Boris Diaw 15 and Leandro Barbosa 15, nine in the fourth quarter.

Kobe Bryant, who averaged 35.4 points this year, had only 22 in Sunday's loss.

Bryant, the NBA scoring champion with 35.4 points per game, scored 22 points — barely half the 42.5 he averaged against Phoenix in the regular season — on 7-for-21 shooting, 1-of-6 3's. But Lamar Odom had 21 points and 14 rebounds and Luke Walton matched his career best in any NBA game with 19 points.

Arroyo Rolling at Plate, on Mound

Reds newcomer off to a hot start entering series against the Nats

BASEBALL | They don't need him to pull a Babe Ruth, but won't complain, either.

When Cincinnati traded powerful outfielder Willy Mo Pena to Boston on March 20 for pitcher Bronson Arroyo and cash, they were excited to get a quality starter with postseason experience. Hitting the ball was already their forte. Pitching ... well, not so much.

But four starts into the season,

Arroyo has hit as many home runs (two) as Ken Griffey Jr.

But with the other Reds hitters picking up the slack, the team is within two games of first in the National League Central entering the week and assistant general manager Dean Taylor is pretty happy with the new starter's arm.

"We saw Bronson as someone who would come in and throw strikes," Taylor said. "If we get a solid six innings out of our starters ... we're going to be very tough to beat."

While the rest of the Reds staff has struggled, the Arroyo move has paid off on the hill for Cincinnati. The right-hander — who is slated to pitch against the Nationals on Wednesday — is 3-0 with a 3.04 ERA this season. That's a far cry from the Reds' NL-worst 5.87 team ERA.

"We have a club that's offensively oriented," Taylor said. "To a large degree, our success will depend on pitching."

After Arroyo, those pitching numbers get a little scary. The former Red Sox hurler is the only Reds starter with an ERA below 6.00, and, on Saturday, Reds pitchers tied a Major League record by allowing five home runs in one inning in an 11-0 loss to Milwaukee. ERIC BRANDNER

Ortiz Lifts Sox With Long Ball And Small Ball

BASEBALL | Big Papi can bunt, too.

David Ortiz homered and had a rare bunt single to help the Boston Red Sox end a three-game losing streak with a 6-3 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays on Sunday.

Ortiz hit a two-run shot off Josh Towers (0-4) in the first for his eighth home run. He has 10 homers in his last 13 games against Toronto.

When Toronto's defense shaded toward right field in a defensive shift in the sixth, Ortiz executed a perfect bunt between the mound and third base. Third baseman Troy Glaus, playing short, didn't even get a throw off.

It was Ortiz's second career bunt. His previous was August 21, 2005 versus Anaheim. (AP)

Jason Giambi drove in five runs as the New York Yankees dominated the Baltimore Orioles, 7-1. The Yankees took two of three games in the series against the Birds.

'Unhittable' Johnson Leads Yanks Past O's

Giambi drives in five runs in New York's 7-1 victory to claim series

ORIOLES | Jason Giambi and the rest of the Bronx Bombers figure to score plenty of runs this season, so even they know the biggest key to a big year stands 6-foot-10 and on the mound.

Randy Johnson rebounded from a poor outing and dominated Baltimore with ease, and Giambi homered twice and drove in five runs Sunday as the New York Yankees cruised to a 7-1 victory over the Orioles.

Derek Jeter added three hits for the Yankees, who took two of three in the series. New York has won 11 of 14 against Baltimore dating to last season.

Miguel Tejada homered and had all three hits off Johnson (3-2), roughed up in his previous start at Toronto. "Early on he was a little flat with his slider. All of a sudden he started getting on top and putting people away," Yankees manager Joe Torre said. "He was just about unhittable today." (AP)

No Dodging Draft For Younger Vick

Troubles at Va. Tech gave quarterback no choice but to go pro

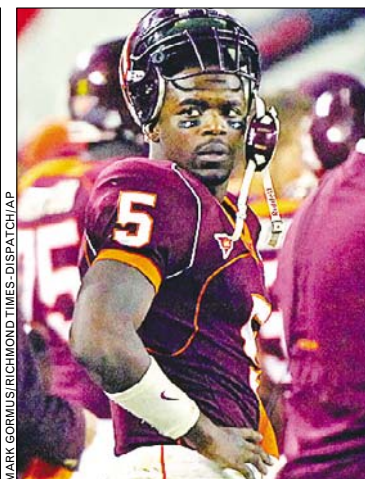

NFL DRAFT | Psst, here's a tip making the rounds: Stay away from Michael Vick's little brother in the NFL draft. He's another Maurice Claret or Lawrence Phillips waiting to happen.

"That kind of hurts me," Marcus Vick said. "Maurice and Lawrence were definitely guys who had a bad past. They're not even in the league anymore. But I'm a hard worker. I'm going to keep on fighting through my ups and downs."

Vick is one of the most intriguing players in this weekend's draft, a talented quarterback with famous bloodlines who managed to get into all sorts of trouble during his stormy career at Virginia Tech.

Reckless driving. Marijuana possession. Serving alcohol to underage girls. Speeding. Driving with a suspended license. Allegations that he pulled a gun on three people in a McDonald's parking lot.

On the field, Vick reacted with an obscene gesture at West Virginia when the home fans taunted him. Then, after being tackled in the Gator Bowl, he stomped on the left calf of Louisville defensive star Elvis Dumervil.

Marcus Vick's on- and off-the-field problems loom over his draft status.

"Just because he's my brother, that doesn't give him the right to step on another player's leg during a game. It doesn't give him the right to get into some of the other situations he's gotten himself into," said Michael Vick, the Atlanta Falcons' Pro Bowl quarterback.

The younger Vick's college career ended a year early — after he had already missed an entire season for disciplinary reasons. With basically no other options, he entered the NFL draft knowing he wasn't exactly a hot commodity.

"The trend in the NFL is away from bad-character guys," said Mike Mayock, a draft analyst for the NFL Network. PAUL NEWBERRY (AP)

Underdog Oilers Take One in Detroit

Two days after OT win, top-seeded Red Wings show weakness

NHL PLAYOFFS | The Edmonton Oilers are using a passive trap to stay with Detroit.

Just when they seemed to lull the Red Wings to sleep, the Oilers picked the right times to be aggressive in Game 2.

Brad Winchester and Fernando Pisani scored less than a minute apart late in the second period to rally Edmonton to a 4-2 victory over the top-seeded Red Wings on Sunday that tied the first-round playoff series.

Dwayne Roloson made 33 saves for the Oilers, who also got goals from Chris Pronger and Jarret Stoll to get even 1-1 in the best-of-seven Western Conference match-up. Detroit won the first game in a double-overtime thriller.

The Oilers clogged the middle of the ice with a trap for much of the game, negating Detroit's talent.

"They did a pretty good job in Trailing 2-1, the Oilers did some aggressive forechecking while Detroit seemed casual with the puck. That led to the tying and go-ahead goals that made it 3-2 with 1:14 left in the second period.

"Everybody said this was going to be a tough series," Detroit's Brendan Shanahan said. "We knew we'd have to win a game in Edmonton."

THE REAL DEAL: "Silent Hill," a scary movie based on a video game, was the top-earning film last weekend. "Hill" took the crown from the spoof "Scary Movie 4," which fell to No. 2. "The Sentinel," "Ice Age 2" and "The Wild" rounded out the top 5.

BACK IN BLACK: Pink Floyd-esque rockers the Secret Machines question the corporate behemoth that feeds them.

Cash Machines?

Warner Bros. wants to spread the word about the Secret Machines

MUSIC | The more things change, the more they stay the same for psychedelic rock act the Secret Machines.

When the band released "Now Here Is Nowhere" in 2004 on Reprise Records, the label worked it as if it were an indie release. The album was made available to iTunes three months ahead of its physical release and was also given to a number of blogs. The move was heralded as the first time a major used blogs to share an act's music, and while there was some online derision, the promotion did help build an early audience for the band.

For the Secret Machines' second major-label release, "Ten Silver Drops," due April 25, the act wanted a similar marketing setup. This time around, however, Reprise was in a less giving mood. "Now Here Is Nowhere" has sold almost 90,000 copies, after all.

"We were like, 'This record is done. Put it out,'" vocalist/guitarist Brandon Curtis says. "We wanted it on our Website and on MySpace right away. They said, 'No, not this time.'"

But Reprise's marketing plan fell apart in February when "Ten Silver Drops" was leaked to peer-to-peer networks.

Curtis has words for the perpetrator: "Thank you, whoever you are."

Reprise made the album available to online retailers, where it has sold 1,500 copies so far in the United States, according to Nielsen SoundScan. Curtis doesn't believe any sales were lost by releasing it online.

Perry Watts-Russell, senior vice president of A&R at Warner Bros., says, "We think they stand apart from most bands today, and the intention was that using online tools could help convey that message. My own impression is that we have created a cult audience for this band, and that we don't yet know when or if that cult will expand to a larger number."

If the band forever stays a cult act, it isn't due to a lack of ambition. "Ten Silver Drops" features heavily layered guitars, with melodies and harmonies drifting in and out of largely midtempo songs. Pink Floyd is the band the Secret Machines are most often compared to, but the band's wash of guitars perhaps owes a bigger debt to such acts as My Bloody Valentine and Ride.

To help promote "Ten Silver Drops," the band shot a film in Marfa, Texas, based on the songs on the album. "Time will tell whether they pull it off, but it's certainly a creative endeavor," Watts-Russell said of the film. TODD MARTENS (BILLBOARD)

Cool Houses From Koolhaas

The famed Dutch architect talks about design at the NBM

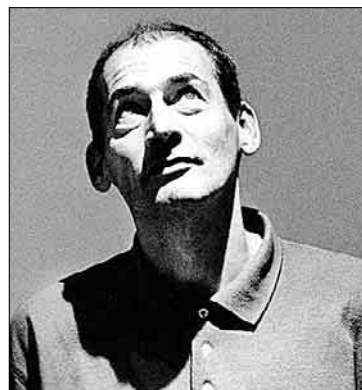

DISCUSSIONS | Look out, Louisville! Rem Koolhaas has designs on you.

The feted architect's office of Metropolitan Architecture, based in New York, Beijing and Rotterdam in the Netherlands recently unveiled plans to build a trio of condo, hotel and office towers reaching 703 feet high near the Louisville waterfront, girdled by an art museum that will float outward, like a gigantic oil derrick, at the 22nd floor. The assemblage looks vaguely like a three-legged barstool, and its scale and reptilian skin resemble nothing else in town.

If they did, of course, the architect would have to start over.

The 2000 Pritzker Prize laureate Koolhaas, 61, who is speaking today at the National Building Museum, is obsessed with size, often for its own sake, as his 1,300-odd-page book with Bruce Mau, "S, M, L, XL" (Monacelli, 1997) disclosed to graduate students worldwide.

Koolhaas has made inconsistency a specialty. Into the world of sizes and even the architecture realm, he has deposited a blitz of ideas and images about civilization that move so quickly their frequent frailties barely register, and neither do the remote flares of brilliance. Out of chaos, more chaos. BRADFORD MCKEE

'Money' Shouts

Viewers are listening to the high-volume rants of Jim Cramer

TELEVISION | During any hour of CNBC's "Mad Money," you'll find a balding, goateed man waving his hands, pointing his finger at the camera and moving about the zone talking, pushing buttons and yes, yelling. As the Dr. Phil of Wall Street, Jim Cramer is always telling viewers his own version of "Get Real."

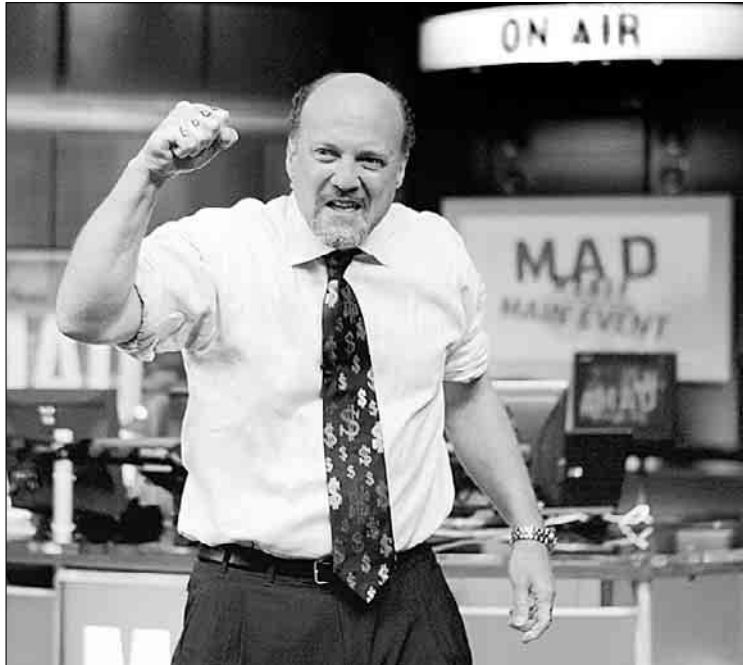

"I'm a shouter. There are people who are low talkers. I'm a high talker," said the 51-year-old Cramer, who came to CNBC after a lucrative hedge-fund career and founding thestreet.com.

Not that anyone, least of all CNBC, is complaining.

"Mad Money" has brought some buzz to CNBC's traditionally lackluster after-market-close lineup. Susan Krakower, vice president of strategic development at CNBC who co-created the show with Cramer, thinks it's a start.

"My job is to bring the volume up at CNBC," Krakower says. "You want to be listening to Jim."

Cramer and "Mad Money" have certainly done that, with stock picks and analysis mixed with jazz and literary references.

HOT BLOODED: Former hedge-fund administrator Jim Cramer uses brash gestures, a strong set of pipes and a questionable wardrobe to connect with viewers.

There have been criticisms of Cramer's technique, and sniping about the accuracy of his picks. Cramer himself points to his own history as a hedge-fund manager as qualifications. He also emphasizes that it's not just about making money.

"This is a show that is about education, entertainment and making money. And I think that people should recognize that you need all three components going forward if you're going to be successful," Cramer says.

"It's not a 'build it and they will come' situation. There are many people who think that it is and I think that they will be continually surprised to the downside with that view, as we say on Wall Street."

J.J. Abrams accepts mission to boldly go where others failed

LOS ANGELES | "Mission: Impossible III" director J.J. Abrams is going from Cruise control to warp speed.

After directing Tom Cruise in "M:I3," Abrams has committed to produce the 11th "Star Trek" feature film and there are plans for him to direct as well, Paramount Pictures announced Friday. Abrams also will write the script with his "M:I3" co-writers, Paramount spokeswoman Nancy Kirkpatrick said.

The studio is hoping to release the film in 2008. No plot for the movie has been nailed down and no one has been cast for the film. Neither William Shatner nor Leonard Nimoy, who portrayed Captain Kirk and Mr. Spock in the original "Star Trek" TV show, has been approached, Kirkpatrick said.

"Star Trek" movies have grossed more than $1 billion but the last one, "Star Trek: Nemesis," four years ago did relatively weak box office and got tepid reviews, while the last TV incarnation, "Star Trek: Enterprise," was canceled last year. ROBERT JABLON (AP)

St. Cloud, Fla.'s WiFi is free for users, but not devoid of errors

GROWING PAINS | Joe Lusardi's friends back in New York couldn't believe it when he told them he'd have free Internet access through his city's new Wi-Fi network.

It's free all right, but residents are, to some extent, getting what they pay for. More than a month after St. Cloud launched what analysts say is the country's first free citywide Wi-Fi network, Lusardi and others in this 28,000-person Orlando suburb are still paying to use their own Internet service providers as dead spots and weak signals keep some residents offline and force engineers to retool the free system.

"Everybody's happy they were going to have it, but I don't know if they're happy right now," said Lusardi, a 66-year-old retired New York City transit worker.

The same troubles with the small

Residents in St. Cloud, Fla., are finding the city's WiFi network less than reliable.

town's big Internet project could be lessons for municipalities from Philadelphia to San Francisco considering similar networks.

St. Cloud officials are spending more than $2 million on a network they see as a pioneering model for freeing local families, schools and businesses from monthly Internet bills. As of last week, nearly 3,500 users had registered for the network, logging 176,189 total hours of use.

So far, there have been plenty of calls from frustrated residents.

"All technology has its hiccups, and sometimes more than hiccups," St. Cloud Mayor Donna Hart said. "It'll probably be a major challenge for some time until the technology is such that it works properly."

Pentecostals flock to the city of their birth, 100 years ago

It was 1906 when William Seymour, the son of slaves, traveled to a small church to preach that speaking in tongues was the ultimate path to salvation. The congregation rejected his message and promptly kicked him out.

Committed to his belief, Seymour started his own prayer group — first at a friend's house, then at an abandoned church in Los Angeles. Within weeks, people were streaming to the City of Angels to see the services where worshippers fell to the ground and uttered unintelligible sounds.

The boisterous, three-year revival that followed made international headlines and is widely credited as the birth of modern-day Pentecostalism. The movement, once relegated to the theological fringe, now claims up to 600 million followers and remains one of the fastest-growing sectors of Christianity, according to Vinson Synan, dean of Regent University's School of Divinity.

Beginning this past Saturday and throughout this week, up to 60,000 will descend on Los Angeles to mark the movement's 100th birthday, a celebration that began with a visit to the street corner where the revival church once stood.

"We see the centennial as a homecoming for the movement, a wonderful memory of what God did 100 years ago," said the Rev. Billy Wilson, executive director of the Center for Spiritual Renewal, the sponsor. "We want to show the world that Pentecostals are about policemen were posted full time at the church to keep order. The story bore the headline "Weird Babel of Tongues: New Sect of Fanatics is Breaking Loose." Word spread across the nation about the massive revival under way.

One of the revival's most notable characteristics was that blacks and whites worshipped under the same roof and shared pastoral duties. "At its height, it drew people from all classes, wealthy and poor, Hispanics, blacks, Jews," said Synan.

Today, Pentecostalism's influence can be felt in other evangelical churches, particularly in the music and worship style of megachurches, Synan said. "I can go into almost more than just feeling good and speaking in tongues."

Pentecostals believe in a personalized commitment to Christ and a second experience known as "baptism in the Holy Spirit." That baptism is most commonly accompanied by speaking in tongues, though other "gifts" from the Holy Spirit can include faith healing, the casting out of demons and modern-day prophecies.

Mainline Christians had rejected speaking in tongues for more than a thousand years, believing that the Holy Spirit's gift stopped with the apostles. But when Seymour came to Los Angeles in 1906, conditions were ripe for his message. The rough-edged town of 240,000 residents had doubled its population in just six years, and the city sprouted so many new churches that modern-day experts have called it an "American Jerusalem."

Hundreds of Christians were so concerned about the freewheeling mentality of the rapidly growing city that they had broken away from mainstream denominations to pray for a massive spiritual revival.

Those concerns reached a fever pitch on April 18 — just five weeks after Seymour's arrival — when San Francisco was rocked by a massive earthquake, which many saw as a sign of the apocalypse.

The same day as the disaster, a major Los Angeles newspaper published a front-page story about Seymour's prayer meetings — all-night services so rowdy that two any Baptist and Methodist church and feel like I'm in a Pentecostal church," he said. "They sing the same songs, the same choruses, they lift their hands."

Modern Pentecostals are less likely to speak in tongues, however, perhaps in part because the practice caused them to be shunned by some mainline denominations. Experts estimate that only 40 percent of Pentecostals speak in tongues today, and even fewer do so overseas. GILLIAN FLACCUS (AP)

Business

Having mastered the casino, tribes turn to lavish golf courses

Dacotah Ridge Golf Club sits deep inside Minnesota farm country, far from any four-lane highways and surrounded by towns with tiny populations.

But the remote location hasn't kept golfers from flocking to test their skills against the stiff winds, rolling hills and demanding greens at the club, whose owner, the Lower Sioux Indian Community, also happens to operate the Jackpot Junction Casino Hotel up the road.

In Minnesota and elsewhere, American Indian tribes that have mastered the casino gambling trade are increasingly venturing into the golf course business. The immaculate layouts springing up around the country are routinely landing on must-play lists of leading golf magazines.

“The native tribes that own casinos are realizing that you have to have something more than just a casino to bring guests in,” said Henry Bouley, a member of the Sault Ste. Marie Tribe of Chippewa and the organizer of the Native American Cup golf tournament.

Bob Larsen, a member of the Lower Sioux Tribe, surveys Dacotah Ridge Golf Club.

There are more than 50 tribal-owned courses in 16 states, and another 20 or so are planned. More than half are situated near casinos. The building boom has been recent, with at least 40 percent constructed since the turn of the century.

Golf and tribal casinos mix well, said Sean Hoolehan, the president of the 21,000-member Golf Course Superintendents Association of America. “Gamblers aren't necessarily golfers, but golfers are generally gamblers,” Hoolehan said.

Many tribes don't leave that to chance, offering cut-rate packages to lure golfers and encourage them to check out the casino, too. At Dacotah Ridge, for instance, a night in the hotel, breakfast and a round of golf can run as low as $100 in the summer.

“Golf generally is a lousy business. Most courses don't make any money,” said Brad Klein of Golfweek magazine. “Golf is designed to sell something. Usually it's real estate; in this case it's casino rooms.”

Tribes have gone all out to reel in visitors, hiring revered designers like Tom Fazio, Pete Dye and Rees Jones, whose involvement can earn courses instant acclaim. The $8 million Dacotah Ridge course came from Jones, who has designed more than 100 courses.

Bob Larsen, one of the first players off the tee when the course opened its season this past week, said Dacotah Ridge stands out from other courses he's played. “It's so wide open. There's no worries about getting hit by another hole or anything like that,” Larsen said. “This caliber is just far and above.” BRIAN BAKST (AP)

LOOK

A LooLo Textiles scarf, above, is made from biodegradable, organically made yarn; a crisp, linen-looking blazer from EDUN, right, is woven from hemp.

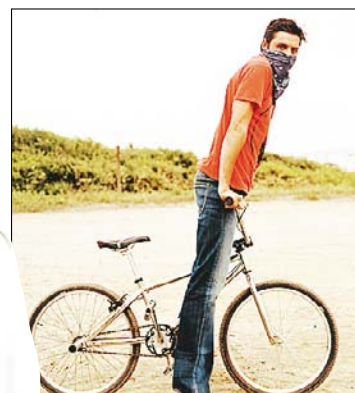

Earthly Pleasures

Eco-friendly styles lure the non-crunchy

It seems that environmental awareness is in fashion these days. Literally. From EDUN, the recently launched fair-trade-produced clothing line that is the brainchild of Bono, his wife, Ali Hewson and designer Rogan Gregory (the man behind Rogan jeans and Loomstate, the latter of which is also organic), to the sustainable shoes of Terra Plana, to the eco-friendly knits by Canadian company LooLo Textiles, it seems that designers are putting their money where their mouths are.

For LooLo Textiles designer Joanna Notkin, her light-bulb moment came while working as a jewelry designer in the late 1990s. "I [was making] flowery, very colorful stuff and it was flying off the shelves," said Notkin. "But I realized that within a year or two or three, all this sort of inexpensive costume jewelry I was designing might have some part that broke off or the thing would have gone out of style, and it would end up in some landfill somewhere. That weighed really heavily on me as a designer."

She had always loved textiles so, after going back to school to study textile design and discovering biodegradable, organically made Climatex Lifecycle yarns, Notkin was off and running with LooLo, a line of lush-hued, heavily textured knit scarves and home accessories. "Climatex uses dyes that have all the heavy metals and really toxic chemicals taken out of them," she said. "They can't come up with every color — like, I'm never going to get a bright hot pink, because it takes a lot of toxic chemicals to make any really vivid, vibrant color."

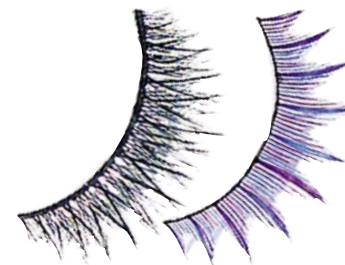

Accessories are getting environmentally conscious, too. The Voltaic Systems backpack, for instance, has three solar panels on the front that allow you to charge your iPod, cell phone, MP3 player, digital camera and PDA on the fly, and Terra Plana has long been known for making funky-chic unisex shoes, which just happen to be crafted from earth-friendly materials.

And the clientele for eco-fashion is more broad than even the designers initially anticipated.

"When I started the company, I thought the typical LooLo customer would be some eco-friendly person," said Notkin. "But as it turns out, it's really fashion-loving people. I think what I've learned in the last few years is that the answer to all this environmentalism is that people aren't going to buy a bag or scarf or sweater because it's organic. They are buying it because it looks great on them and feels great on them and they love it." LAUREN DAVID

Though hardly suitable for job interviews, the new LASH FREAK LASHES from Hard Candy ($8, Sephora) are fun little additions for when you're feeling weird. Available in Freak (black with strands of silver, left), Fantasy (purple and blue, right) and Flirt (all black, with varying lash lengths creating a scalloped effect), they'll give more of an edge to your doe-eyed look. Latex-free lash glue is included. While these falsies are fun, we wouldn't recommend them for the office, unless you want your co-workers staring quizzically at your face all day. But for a night on the town, they'll make your eyes and your style pop.

Hair

Nobody's Perfect

It is a truth universally acknowledged that you're never going to blow your hair straight as well as your stylist. A truth less known is that women will nonetheless continue to buy products promising salon-quality blow-outs. Hence EASY-STRAIGHT PERFECT BLOW-OUT PROFESSIONAL BLOW-DRY SPRAY ($8). While the stuff is an excellent detangler, has very little scent and defrizzes hair without weighing it down, "perfect" is a bit of a reach. Blown-out hair looked the same as always, meaning not quite as good as when done by a pro. K.P.K.

Post TV columnist LISA DE MORAES was online Friday to talk about TV hairstyles, the trouble with “House,” and other TV curiosities. | washingtonpost.com/iveonline

Have you seen the HBO drama about Elizabeth I with Helen Mirren and Jeremy Irons? If so, is it as terrific as everyone says?

There are some actors who are worth watching no matter what they're in because you know they're going to deliver a fascinating performance. Yes, I think it's a good production, but I always love crunchy gravel stuff.

So “Celebrity Cooking” ... worst idea of the season or worst idea of the past five seasons?

Since I can't remember two seasons ago, I'll go with worst of the season.

My head is in your hands. I'm getting my hair cut this afternoon. Who has the best hair on TV? Whoever you say, I'll bring her picture in with me and get it cut that way.

Honestly, I don't think there's ever been a TV cut that even comes close to touching The Rachel from "Friends." And you're chatting with someone who pays a lot of attention to hair on TV.

I finally figured out what bugs me about Oprah. She is constantly watching herself in the monitor instead of looking into the camera. Has anyone else noticed this? Do you think it comes across as self-conscious or self-absorbed?

I'll pay more attention next time I watch. And, in answer to your question, she shows in so many bigger ways that she is self-absorbed I doubt that adding this to the list will make any difference.

Re “Deal or No Deal”: Dennis Quaid was on the “Daily Show” hawking his movie “American Dreamz” (inspired by “A.I.”) and he said that he didn’t watch “American Idol,” but was fascinated by “Deal or No Deal.” The reason being that it was the first game show in history based entirely on guessing. Jon Stewart replied that the show's contestants didn't actually need to have a head in order to play.

It was hilarious, as was Quaid's explanation of his new movie. And yes, we once thought "Millionaire" was mindless, what with the multiple choice questions and the first two questions that any idiot could answer. ... But "Millionaire" now looks like "Jeopardy" next to "Deal or No Deal."

“Hugh Laurie is so great. Am I the only person who who’s about to stop watching ‘House.’”

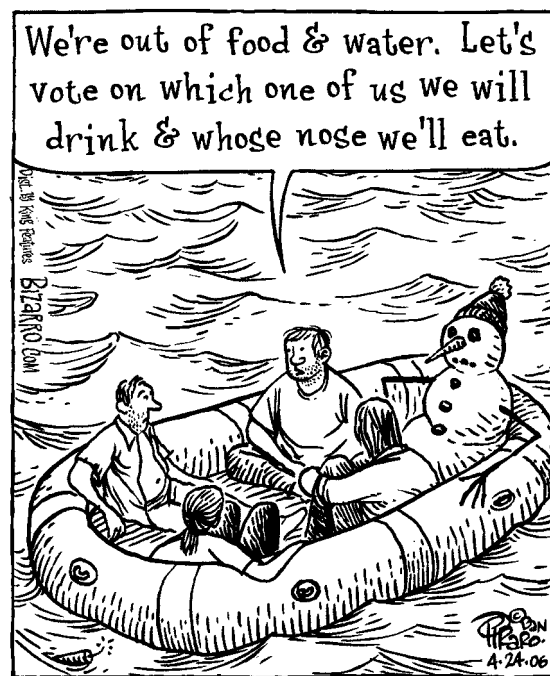

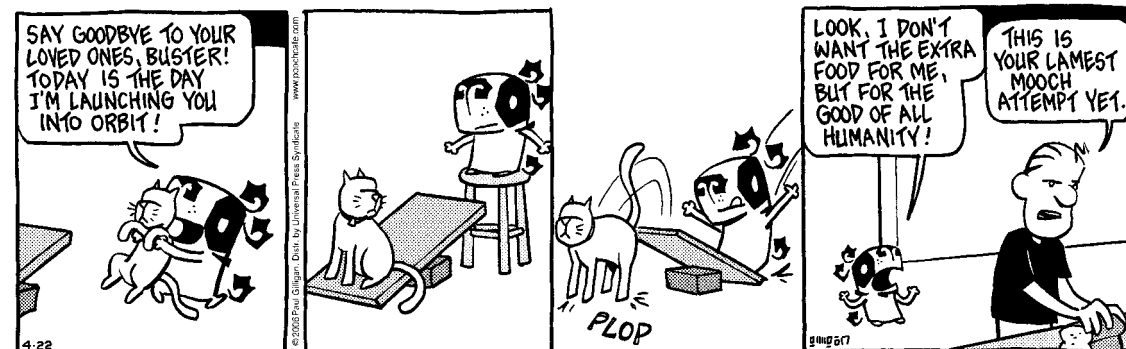

Loved "House" when it first came on, loved it. But now its sort of grating on me as there has been zero character development or new cast members this year. Same old one-hour story arc: Person gets sick, only House can save her, House gets nasty at some point, Cuddy questions House, House is right, person lives. Blah blah blah. Hugh Laurie is so great. Am I the only person who's about to stop watching this show?

Hey, he put on a tux and played blackjack or something like that last week. That was different. Maybe they'll send him on vacation in an upcoming episode. Or send him to the grocery store.

Horoscope

By Stella Wilder

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You're not likely to have a great deal of time to yourself; your time and counsel will be valuable to others from dawn to dusk and beyond.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A little play-acting may enable you to realize one or two things you seemed to have forgotten in the shuffle.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you're away from home, you will surely want reminders of a time gone by. Nostalgia will be worth much.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Though you can't expect to get something for nothing, you can count on someone in the know to share a bit of important information.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You'll encounter few if any guarantees — unless you offer them for yourself. Concentrate, and you will enjoy one or more sure things.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You're going to have to do something positive with the anger you've bottled up inside. Don't know it's there? That's the first step.

SCORPIO (Oct. 3-Nov. 21) After a period of doubt and insecurity on the job, you may feel that, during the coming week, you'll be back on track and flying high.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Feel free to join in the fun -- but don't forget the one thing that really separates you from the crowd. That's the real key.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) What you see and hear must not be forgotten — and you can thank a friend for giving you repeated and timely reminders.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You may have a reason to turn away from things as a result of a surprising encounter with reminders of things past.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Be willing to take the lead, especially when friends and colleagues are unwilling to forge ahead on their own. Show them the way.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You will be energized and inspired, thanks to the company of one or two important friends who know you better than you think they do.
